JAUNTY NEW MODELS IN EARLY AUTUMN COATS.

All indications are in the direction of two classes of coats for the country reasonthose I inches long and those I inches.
Some handsome models are of ribeline, with revers and collar of broadcloth in a lighter shade. Embroidery is added in several cases, and in others there is a cording or cases, and in others there is a cording or applique of faille or velvet. For formal wenr velvet is said to be a certainty, as well as high-grade velveteens. As a rule, coats of these last materials will be made long, with ample fullness in the skirts.

The favored materials will be kersey, frieze, vicuma, broadcloth and slik. There are many varieties of the mode, including the double-breasted surrout, coachmen's coats, long directoirs and automobile styles, while for storm coats the Ragland and Newmar-

The important feature of the autumn tailor-made costume is the return to the simpler lines of a few years ago. It has been so elaborated of late that it was hardly recognizable as the mode based on the severity of masculine fashions. Embrodery, applique, the thousand and one fanciful touches of last year, will be innoved by the tailor maid of 1991-92, who will tolerate nothing more frivolous than stitchings, straps and military braid. Corded fabrics are returning to favor for these costumes, displacing to some extent the smoothly finished cloths in vogue last year.

The fashions indicated thus far are not encouraging to the petite or the extremely slender young woman, but there is hope even for her. Short box coats, blouses and Louis XV coats all have place in the list of modish garments, so every one may choose. A little woman is likely to be grotesque in a long or a "three-quarters" coat, and is fruity certain to be insignificant in a severe tailor-made costume. Her only chance lies in studying her individuality, and even accentuating it. The dainty and the essentially feminine are her distinctive characteristics, and, if properly treated, may give her a charm all her own, even if exilted unlike the mere imposing impression made by the tail girl of ample tive characteristics, and, if properly treated, may give her a charm all her own, even if eathrely unlike the mere imposing impression made by the tail sirl of ample proportion who can look stunning in severe simplicity.

The little woman must have a tailered gown, of course, but the tight-fitting coat that extends below the waist line is not for her. A jaunty recfer may sait her well, and she is to be pardoned if she refuses to let the Eton go. It was made for her by the guardian genine of little women.

Some of the sheeves in the rew coats are novel in effect. Others are variations of the bishop and the directoire, with the so-called Paquin, which shows an understeeve, still in the list. One long coat seen the other day had rather large sleeves, over which was a cape reaching to the elbow, cut in a scallored effect at the armpli, and continued in another deep scalled to the revers.

The new slik waists are extremely pretty. Those made of sailn creps de chine are especially suited to the autumn months, and are among the newest. Peau de sole also is seen in many handsome models.

Flannel waists are as dainty as can be imagined, and are strappel, sitched, gilt buttoned and embroidered to a bewildering degree.

When They Are at Their Rest Dis-cussed by an Artist, an Author and a Society Girl.

cussed by an Artist, an Author and a Society Girl.

The artist urged that he distilled to paint the portraits of women between the area of twenty-five and forty years. Before twenty-five the face has an expectancy which charms, it is looking forward wan joyous freshness and hope, and it is full of puzzling promises. At forty the character is formed, and the lines of the countenance are stronger in the painter's study; but in intervening years the face has loss its expectancy and is liable to be indifferent, says Woman's Life.

The author liked to study women between the ages of thirty and forty. They had then the experience of the world and the joyousness of youth. In those years they were brightest and most interesting.

The acciety woman thought that it was impossible to give general answers to the question, as individual women differ in regard to the most attractive age. Some are most charming at forty, while others have passed their prime at twenty. At thirty or upward the best nature of a woman will show to every advantage, but probably the balance of opinion turns in favor of from eighteen to twenty-five.

Pathetic Episode of the Pretty Dim-pled Baby, the Drowsy Pug and the Rogged Little Waif. A smart peramoulator stood outside a small shop. In it slept a pretty, dimpled baby, and bestie it lay it fall, drowey pag puppy, its nose almost touching the baby's check.

puppy, its nose almost touching the baby a cheek.

Beside them stood a little ragged waif, whese tattered garmenis barely covered her with decency. In turn sin stroked the baby and the puppy, says Home Notes.

A lady passing, noticed the sitange picture—the heautifully dressed baby, the puppy and the ragged child. The baby's mother was in the shop.

"Are you looking after them?" she inquired of the walf.

In a moment the child's face was glorified by a heavenly smile.

"Ne, ma'am," said she, "I am only loving them."

PLANT LIFE LORE.

The Love of Plants is Like All Other Love, as He Who Understands Best Loves Best.

The love of plants is like all other love. It is an ancient fable to picture love as blind, but very few of those ancient fables are so untrue as this is. Passion, indeed, is blind, but love differs from passion in that it becomes truer, nobler and deeper, the more firmly it is founded on intimate and intelligent knowledge of its object. He

All indications are in the direction of two classes of coats for the coming gensenthose I inches long and those it inches. Some handsome models are of zibeline, with revers and collar of broadcloth in a lighter shade. Embroidery is added in several cases, and in others there is a cording of applique of faille or velvet. For formal wear velvet is said to be a certainty, as well as high-grade velveteens. As a rule, coats of these last materials will be made long, with ample fullness in the skirts.

The long coat of former years has often failed to be becoming because of its attempt to cling closely to the figure, without due allowance for skirts, but the new style is half fitting, with a sudden thare at the waist line to allow for the curve of the laps.

MODES IN JEWELRY.

Will Be Popular This Winter.

The tendency in much of the Jewelry at present is to secure an effect which will import an appearance of age, so that a suggestion of the heirloom will be conveyed. The old gray finish is extensively utilized to secure this.

Another style revived from the days of long ago is the cameo pins, now used for the front of the belt. Newer is the cameo for the back of the belt.

Amethysts, also beloved by our grandmothers in the days when they were belies, will be very popular during the coming season. Women who have fine examples of the purple stone hidden away in their Jewel caskets may bring them out with a fashlonable flourish.

LADY SARAH WILSON.

Famous Army Nurse and War Correspondent Will Visit the United States on Her Vacation.

Lady Saah Wilson, who is expected to sail for this country from Liverpool September 1 on the White Star Line steamer Celtic, is one of the most prominent figures among women who played an active part in the Boer war. Filling positions both as army nurse and war correspondent, she succeeded in getting her dispatches through the Boer lines by paying large bribes to the matives for carrying information back and forth. She was about the only person who escaped from Mafeking during its long siege. In attempting to return to the city inter she was captured by the Boers, but was finally exchanged as a prisoner of war for a woman horse thief named Viljoen, whose liberty the Boers were eager to obtain.

White Stockings of Various Design

Are Worn With Patent Leather or Duil-Finished Low Shoes. or Dull-Finished Low Shoes.

"Are white stockings really much worn."
a saleswoman in one of the shops was asked yesterday; to which she replied by opening numerous long, narrow boxes, in which was displayed snowy hosiery of varied designs. White stockings are worn with either patent-leather or dull-finished low shoes, for both afternoon and evening. They are particularly in evidence at the senshore, the open-work effects being preferred to the plain white stockings, atthough either make a stylish combination with the fluffy summer gown. White grounds with a dash of black to relieve them are also a style much favored by the smartly attired belies of the summer resorts.

Queen Margherita of Italy Has Large Collection of Shoes Worn by Famous Rulers.

Most women have a hobby for collecting, but to make a hobby of collecting the foot-gear and gloves once worn by dead and gone royal ladies is not a fad to be lightly taken up, for naturally the dimedity in obtaining these articles is generally very great, says Home Notes.

Queen Margherita of Italy has, however, a large and interesting collection of royal shoes and gloves, among which are some which belonged to our good Queen Bess and to that ill-fated Queen of France, Marie Antonette.
